THE CAMADIANS IS PARIS.

I might give you an account of the magnificent display our neighbors the Canadians make. They do themselves great credit. An immense pagoda, five stories high, occupying one of the four main/corners resching a height of seventy-five feet, built of Canadian woods entire, and filled with specimens of manufactures of the products of their soil, mines, miserals, fishing and hunting, gives the looker on a very flattering idea of the country. The Douglass Pite, over 566 years old, 185 years old when Columbus direcevered America—is looked at with years old, 185 years old when Columbus dircovered America—is looked at with much interest, and well it might, 300 toris has a bronze pyramid of immense extent showing the amount of gold mined is twenty-five years, aggregating two hundred millions sterling, whilet the indies alone have contributed a wonderful variety, occupying a large extent of the space of one side in which his R. H., the Prince of Wales, exhibits the presents made him, not only from the Indian Princes, but from all parts of the world; including gems and diamonds, pearls and rubles of ecormous size, and in fact, everything you can imagine is in the list, from the slippars for his dainty feet to the emoking cap for his royal head, not ommitting saddles sparkling with stones for his sisphants and coverings for his camels. The crowd around this exhibit at all times is so dense as to compell the forming of lines and approach in regular order.

Then Austria not to be thrown in the chade exhibits all the presents when have been made to that Royal House, as also the various crowns, sceptres and swords in use, and words by this branch for royalty, while the ladies of the same families contribute their silks and grare and would put some of your lady acquaintances in a phrenzy to look upon, so delicate and superb are they.
